‘Millennials have realised importance of own home’

Residential sales have made a comeback in Q3 of this calendar year owing to pent-up demand from home buyers. The demand for large, premium properties has also shot up. NIRANJAN HIRANANDANI, chairman of Hiranandani Communities, one of the largest property development companies, talks to Raghavendra Kamath on his outlook for both segments of real estate and the road ahead for the property sector. Edited excerpts:

What is your take on the pent-up demand for residential properties? Will it last long?

The pent-up demand will be sustainable. This reflects different hues. To give an example, millennials, who traditionally have been “renters”, have realised the importance of having their own houses and are opting to buy them. Some rent agreements will end in 2021, so the segment will continue to make its presence felt. We will see a similar pattern across segments.

For what kind of residential properties do you see maximum demand?

We see demand for mid-size apartments on the part of first-time home buyers. Also there is pent-up demand for larger, luxury apartments. There is a need for flexi space to integrate new living habits like remote working or work from home, study at home, wellness and fitness at home, open green spaces, etc.

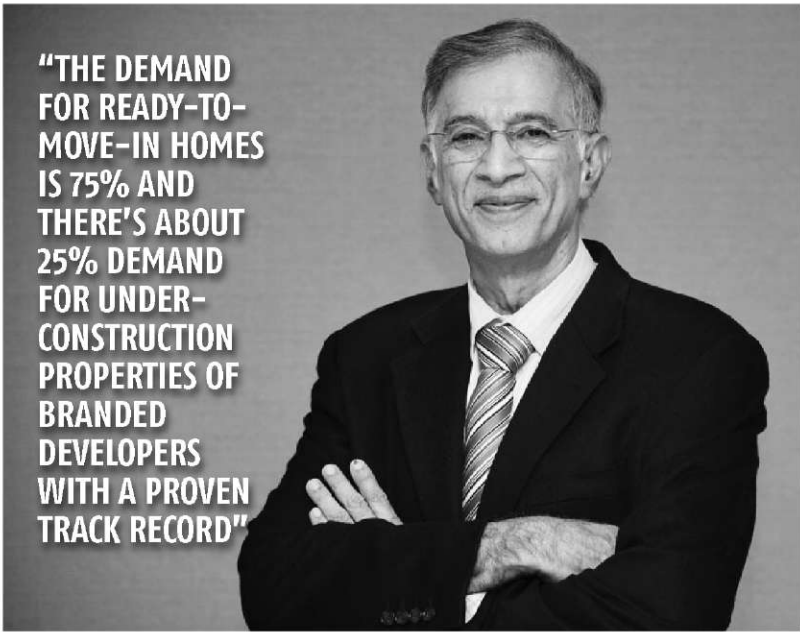

The demand for ready-to-move-in homes is nearly 75 per cent and there is about 25 per cent demand for under-construction properties of branded developers with a proven track record.

Q&A

What is your outlook for commercial real estate? How do you see rents behaving in 2021?

Commercial real estate will bounce back to near normalcy, but the rate of recovery will differ across segments and, in some instances, across micro-markets. Rent trends will largely mirror the demand curve. Premium properties will continue to be in demand; albeit at rentals which will be the “status quo” or even at rental points which reflect the demand/supply ratio.

Vaccination is around the corner and that will fuel the positive outlook for commercial spaces. Segments such as retail, entertainment, hospitality, and food and beverages will take longer to return to pre-pandemic levels through 2021.

What is your wish list for real estate in the Budget?

The revival of real estate is imperative for GDP growth and employment generation and draw in investment from domestic as well as global investors. As the pandemic has thrown up challenges, structural or cyclical, we expect tax rationalisation, an impetus to affordable rental housing, encouraging the extension of special economic zones for job creation, introducing liquidity measures, and ease of doing business.

Are you planning any launches in 2021?

The company is focusing on completing the current projects and obtaining occupational certificates which attract no goods and services tax. With migrant and local labourers back to work, our primary target is the completion of current projects and make ready-to-move-in apartments available for home seekers. We recently launched luxury a three-bed “Admiro” collection at Hiranandani Fortune City, Panvel, Navi Mumbai. A few more residential launches are in the pipeline in Powai, Thane, and Panvel too. We have announced the launch of villa-plotted development in our township project Hiranandani Parks, Oragadam, Chennai. We have also launched boutique retail office spaces ‘Solus’ in Hiranandani Estate Thane. Further commercial office space development is in the pipeline for next year.

What are your plans for data centres, warehousing, and other asset classes?

The group has the expertise to build data centres and has the land for them. Most important, it has power efficiency. These, put together, will create efficiency-plus data centres, with operating costs estimated to reduce by 20 per cent. We have a plan of potentially investing about ₹3,500 crore in data centres across Navi Mumbai, Chennai, and Noida to begin with. The group has invested ₹1,000 crore in its first data centre, which has gone live at the Hiranandani Fortune City township in Panvel.
